Tips From Larryco.com

Signals

There are 3 main kinds of signals:

Count Signal: When declarer leads (from his hand or dummy), you can play hi-lo to show an even number or low first to show an odd number of cards.

Suit Preference: Can be used in many instances, but mainly when you play a card for partner to ruff. A high card (like an 8,9, or 10) shows preference for the higher-ranking side suit while a low card shows preference for the lower-ranking side suit.

Attitude Signal: The most important (by far) signal is used when partner leads a suit or you discard. High means you like it, low means you don't.

The descriptions above assume "Standard" carding (in some parts of the world, the opposite is standard and many U.S. experts play "Upside Down.") For more details visit larryco.com
