Larry's eLessons!

October 23, 2019 Vol. 14 Issue #22

---

One of my favorite things to do is to write up hand analysis. When I write how I think each deal should be bid or played, I hope to model my thinking for new and advancing players. Along with Michael Berkowitz, I write up hands for the Common Game every week. I also wrote up analysis for the October 31st Instant Matchpoint Game. For the Instant Matchpoint Game I analyzed every deal. Whether or not you play that day, reading through this analysis can be informative as you try to put yourself into the seat of each player. You can find details and last year's analysis here.

NEW! Larry's Quizzes -- Expert Deductions

The hardest thing to do in bridge is to properly defend a contract. Experts seem to know where all the cards are. How do they do it? By making a picture of the hands based on the information from the bidding and play so far. See if you can make those same deductions with this new quiz from Larry.

MB's Article -- Recognizing Our Mistakes

We'd all like to be better bridge players. If you feel like you just keep making new mistakes, fear not-- this is the first step to growing as a player. Bridge with Larry Cohen teacher, Michael Berkowitz, will show you why you should embrace your mistakes.

Larry's Articles - The Real Deal #22

Each month Larry writes in Audrey Grant's Magazine about a real deal that was dealt by a bridge celebrity. In this installment from the archives, Larry covers unusual-looking notrump openers as well as handling difficult notrump contracts.

Don't forget, you can find all of Larry's articles on Larryco.com
